Belton Hearing Care Center

by Dr. Brianna Casey, Audiologist with Belton Hearing Care Center in Morrisville

Tinnitus, often described as a persistent ringing or buzzing in the ears, affects an estimated 50 million people and can significantly impact daily life, including workplace performance. New research involving more than 400 participants found that tinnitus not only reduces productivity and concentration but can also contribute to anxiety, depression and insomnia – making it even more difficult for individuals to succeed at work. In fact, about one in five adults with tinnitus report reducing their work hours or leaving their jobs because of the condition.

The study also found encouraging news: evidence-based tinnitus treatments can lessen these effects. Participants who received appropriate intervention experienced reduced tinnitus-related distress along with improvements in mental health

J. Allen Hooper Funeral Chapel and Cremation Services

The J. Allen Hooper Funeral Chapel and Cremation Services of Morrisville offers more than traditional funeral services to veterans, area families, and local residents.

"We do not take a typical, cookie-cutter approach to our funeral services like most other funeral homes in Bucks County," explains Steve Ullrich, the family-owned funeral home's owner and supervisor. "We take advantage of 21st century technology to customize every service for each family and personalize every funeral, especially for veterans."

A short drive from Washington Crossing National Cemetery in Newtown, the funeral chapel specializes in complete funeral arrangements for qualified honorably discharged veterans. Hooper provides eligible veterans with a free metal casket, regardless of the cemetery selected.

For burials at Washington Crossing, veterans and their spouses receive a grave, burial vault, grave opening, headstone, American flag, and military funeral, including a 21-gun salute, saving families approximately $12,000.

Established in 1923, the chapel handles about 150 funerals annually. Its spacious, beautifully decorated facility includes a large chapel with pews, private sitting and living rooms, manicured grounds, and ample on-site parking. It is fully handicapped-accessible.

"We can also handle arrangements for non-traditional, off-site venues to hold a memorial service, such as wineries, parks or other locations," adds Steve. "We have an excellent relationship with the clergy, as well as with the Elks, American Legion, V.F.W. and Masonic Lodges in the Morrisville area."

The experienced team provides compassionate care that reflects the funeral home's motto: "Our Services are Not Just a Day in a Lifetime, We Celebrate a Lifetime in a Day."

Families are given tools to celebrate and memorialize their loved ones using state-of-the-art technology. "Everything is tailored and personalized to the person being memorialized. We offer free video memorial tributes, and families receive their own free website," notes Steve, who has over 45 years of funeral experience.

Families also receive complimentary tribute items including a personalized register book, memorial candle, portrait, tribute blanket, and temporary grave marker.

"We are flexible and full-service. We want families and friends of the deceased to feel better when they leave here than when they first came in."

and sleep. Researchers suggest that helping employees access tinnitus care could improve both individual well-being and workplace productivity.

As an audiologist with Beltone in Morrisville, I am well acquainted with working individuals who experience tinnitus. In my practice, I help patients develop personalized strategies to manage their symptoms. This may include comprehensive hearing evaluations, questionnaires to better understand how tinnitus affects daily life, ear-level hearing devices or sound maskers and collaboration with cognitive-based therapists when appropriate. Together, these approaches can help patients regain confidence and improve their ability to function at work and at home.

I also encourage patients to talk with their physicians about medications that may affect tinnitus, prioritize stress management, get adequate sleep and adopt healthy lifestyle habits that may lessen symptoms. Even though tinnitus is a permanent condition, it is manageable with early intervention and individualized care. Many people find relief and can remain productive, engaged and enjoy a better quality of life despite living with tinnitus.
